Because true belonging only happens when we present our authentic, imperfect selves to the world, our sense of belonging can never be greater than our level of self-acceptance.

Dropping the Masks and Bushels

Human beings wear masks at different times for different reasons. There are also times and situations that we wear “masks,” changing or hiding who we are, to protect our heart and emotions. Hiding what we think and feel from others because we want to be accepted and belong keeps our light from being seen; it would be similar to hiding a candle under a bushel (basket) rather than putting the lit candle in a holder to light the room. Having the courage to be vulnerable, to drop our mask and let our light be seen and felt, is another piece in cultivating authenticity.
